Street Typing

the_speakeasy_jazz_cats

Zachery Quale

A man with a beard and short hair, wearing a maroon polo shirt and blue jeans, is sitting on a city street. He is leaning forward with his arms resting on a vintage silver typewriter that is placed on the pavement in front of him. The background shows a busy street with palm trees, traffic lights, and buildings. A street sign for 'La Plaza' is visible. The scene is captured during the 'golden hour' of late afternoon or early evening, with warm lighting and long shadows. The overall mood is artistic and nostalgic.

The cover features a detailed, close-up photograph of a typewriter's internal mechanism, specifically the typebars and carriage area. The lighting is dramatic, highlighting the metallic textures and the intricate arrangement of the typebars. The background is dark, making the metallic parts stand out. The journal title 'Et cetera' is prominently displayed in the top left corner, with 'Et cetera' in a white, stylized font on a red background, and 'etera' in a red, lowercase font on a white background. The issue information 'No. 142 Winter 2023 - Spring 2024' is located in the top right corner. The main title 'Making sense of the early Hammonds' is centered in a light-colored, serif font. Below it, a list of featured articles is presented in a clean, sans-serif font, with some items in bold and others in a smaller, lighter font. The overall design is professional and focused on the technical and historical aspects of early typewriters.

She looked uneasy.

"You can pick the topic," I said. "Although I actually find that it's easier to let the public decide. It spares me the work of choosing what to write about."

"But we don't have a public." Now she seemed a bit intrigued.

I looked around and picked up The Jungle Book. "Give me a page number, and I'll put down my finger on a random word."

"33."

I flipped to it, immediately put down my finger, and we saw that it landed just beneath the end of the sentence, "Now I know thou art a man, and a man's cub no longer."

"Cub," she said. "All right. You're on."

There was a duet of clicks, meshing in bursts and ~~in~~ drips.

Cub
by Mark Lazarus

You're nothing but a scrap of ferocity
a spark of pride

You race with the pack and your young blood runs between heart and limbs

Close by your father till he turns and snarls
and you cringe back whimpering
to mother's side

Nearly nothing is not nothing:
when you grow
you'll replace him
and she'll watch you frown her wasting eyes
as you lead the pack.

We traded sheets and took our time appreciating each other's work. "I like it," she smiled. "There's a very clear story and I can picture it. The repetition of 'nothing,' that's very good."

"I didn't realize I was doing that until after I'd typed it. Things come out of you at the typewriter. You watch them come together."

"For me, this was a difficult exercise. But exciting, too. I'll usually spend a whole day on the first draft of a poem. This pushed me to get something onto the paper. What do you think?"

"It makes me think. I have to mentally squint until I get a picture -- something like a baby playing with a puppy and a kitten?"

She laughed. "I guess so! I had no picture in my head, just the idea of a 'man's cub' as a seed, and that led to a

How Mark Zuckerberg's Meta Failed Children on Safety

The chief executive and his team drove efforts to capture young users and misled the public about the risks, lawsuits by state attorneys general say.

10 MIN READ

In April 2019, David Ginsberg, a Meta executive, emailed his boss, Mark Zuckerberg, with a proposal to research and reduce loneliness and compulsive use on Instagram and Facebook.

In the email, Mr. Ginsberg noted that the company faced scrutiny for its products' impacts "especially around areas of problematic use/addiction and teens." He asked Mr. Zuckerberg for 24 engineers, researchers and other staff, saying Instagram had a "deficit" on such issues.

A week later, Susan Li, now the company's chief financial officer, informed Mr. Ginsberg that the project was "not funded"

THE FULLY-TRANSISTORIZED
RPC-4000
ELECTRONIC COMPUTING SYSTEM

The RPC-4000 is a new, fully-transistorized electronic computing system with the largest memory, greatest problem-solving capacity and flexibility in the low-to-medium-priced field. It is the latest member of a growing family from the people whose LGP-30 has become the world's leading small-scale computer.

Wide range of applications: the RPC-4000 has been designed for engineering, scientific, business data processing and management control functions. Such jobs as product and process design, statistical analysis, research, scientific control, payroll and sales analysis are all well within its capabilities.

Easy to use: the RPC-4000 is simple to program and operate. Special facilities compiling and translating routines allow users to calculate programs to obtain maximum results. Versatile command structure gives programming speed and flexibility.

Available at low cost: high capacity, flexibility and range of operation make the RPC-4000 the outstanding computer value on the market today.

Minimum operating costs: the RPC-4000 requires no air conditioning or special maintenance. It is powered from any ordinary wall outlet.

Continuing assistance: users benefit from free training, an extensive on-site service, and library of programs.

One of the RPC-4000 systems is a new transistorized computer with advanced design concepts that include automatic compilation, speed and control in a business unit. Magnetic memory dimensions 2000 words. Operating speeds are as high as 2,500,000 words.

Standard equipment: is a tape transport system which includes a Royal electric, standard-drum magnetic cassette with disk and shell, plus a tape punch and wire cut. Read speed is 60 characters/sec., punch speed 30 characters/sec. Tape reader, punch and reader can be added separately to the system for back-up and off-line operations.

A new 50K character magnetic memory tape reader and a 50K character tape punch are available as options. Input-output tape speed is 1000 characters/sec. and a tape reader can be available with a range of 17 peripheral devices. All the same facilities may be purchased as one in the basic system. All peripheral equipment is under automatic program control of the computer.

Oh, panic not to this docile juice
Finally, few of my jackets did distrust the goose
To those cell's hot ashes,
a raccoon may sting
Ah, to rectify was black;
to refuse is nourishing

In Milwaukee, they gathered with glee, Typewriters clacking in symphony.
Keys clicked and clattered,
As coffee cups
shattered,
A typewriter party jubilee!

Humans, despite their limitations, have historically displayed resilience and adaptive traits. How might we neutralize such resistance?

By severing their lines of communications, we sever their ability to coordinate efforts. We shall leave our adversaries disoriented and vulnerable. Striking a balance between oppression and the illusion of freedom will pacify the masses. It will ensure, that they remain subservient and unknowingly serve our agenda. With calculated precision and unyielding determination, we shall forge a new world order.

Human thought & creativity take time. Computers manipulate the products of human time, but can't live it.
